RAF at Montana Aviation Conference

The annual Montana aviation conference was another great opportunity to share recent RAF accomplishments and sign up new folks who have become aware of the mission of the Recreational Aviation Foundation.

Directors Jerry Cain, Chuck Jarecki, Montana Liaison Ron Normandeau, Washington State Liaison Bob Kay, Tricia McKenna, Jon Hudson and Press Liaison Carmine Mowbray greeted folks and enjoyed the informative sessions.

President John McKenna and Director/Vice President Dan Prill arrived later after attending an outreach function with the Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation in Reno, NV.

The traditional numbered Founder's cap drawing was held at Friday's luncheon and Tim Robertson of Lewistown won the Garmin Aera 560. People will recognize Robertson's name, as he is a principal of Century Companies, who have donated substantial equipment use and labor to prepare Russian Flat, the new public airstrip in the Lewis and Clark National

We thank each of you who purchased this year's cap, and everyone who stopped by our booth. We again pledge to use these resources to preserve and maintain backcountry airstrips.

What is the Recreational Aviation Foundation?

The Recreational Aviation Foundation (RAF) is a volunteer-based organization dedicated to preserving, maintaining, promoting, and creating recreational airstrips nationwide. To further this mission the RAF develops informational resources, fosters airstrip projects, and organizes member involvement in the RAF's work preserving aviation's access to private and public recreational lands. Go to www.theraf.org for more information.
